Sabine Marcelis (b. 1985) is a virtuoso at playing with light and color, reflections and transparency. The Dutch designer transforms translucent materials such as glass, synthetic resin, and natural stone into luminous, reflective, expansive objects. Despite their imposing presence and sometimes large dimensions, her works capture the light to unfold a surprising lightness and atmospheric depth. Design, art, and architecture are united in her minimalist designs.

The Circle of Friends edition of Mini Sweep is closely related to Sabine Marcelis's "Sweep Diptych," two yellow synthetic resin panels created especially for the exhibition "Sabine Marcelis – Light and Color." A fine vertical line crosses through this miniature version in pale pink synthetic resin, lending the form an inner tension. The matte surface absorbs light almost completely, diminishing the sense of depth, while the slightly translucent material simultaneously sets the edges aglow. The Mini Sweep comes with a certificate of authenticity and a wall mount.
